Two Join Board of Directors

WEBSTER GROVES, Mo. – Rebuilding Together – St. Louis is honored to announce that Tammy Rothe and Eliza Thompson have recently joined its board of directors.

Rothe, a program manager at IBM Corporation, joins the board after volunteering for the past five years. She volunteered on Rebuilding Day as a volunteer manager and helped coordinate other IBM employee involvement. Rothe brings her information technology and general business management expertise to the organization along with an interest in coordinating special event fundraisers.

Thompson, a Systems Engineer on the TeamCenter Software Development Team at the Boeing Corporation, joins the board after volunteering with Rebuilding Together for the past four years. She served as a house captain for two years and coordinated 25 Boeing house captains and over 800 volunteers during Rebuilding Day 2008. Under Thompson's leadership, Boeing's volunteer involvement has grown from 200 to 800 volunteers. Rebuilding Together-St. Louis nominated Thompson for the St. Louis Business Journals 30 Under 30 Award last year.

"We're extremely excited and honored to have these amazing people on our board," said Executive Director Lynne Rajani. "Their experiences, energy and dedication are invaluable to us as we continue to strive to provide safer living environments for low-income homeowners throughout St. Louis."

Rebuilding Together – St. Louis is an affiliate of a national volunteer organization.
